

Seeking refugee health answers

A TERRITORY GP will travel to the US to research ways of improving refugees' access to health services.

Katherine resident Dr Danielle Butler (pictured), who works as a general practice registrar at the Wurli Wurlinjang Aboriginal Medical Service, will spend six weeks in the US from the end of October.

"I was absolutely thrilled when I heard about the opportunity to go on this trip and I feel really honoured," she said.

Dr Butler said she was looking forward to having the opportunity to use new research tools and databases at the Robert Graham Centre in Washington DC.

The trip has been made possible by a $15,000 grant from the Australian Primary Health Care Research Institute (APHCRI).