

CITATION –Professor Michael Cardew-Hall, Office of the Deputy Vice-Chancellor (research and Innovation)

The Chancellor's Award for Distinguished Contribution to the University is awarded for distinguished service of a high degree.

Professor Mick Cardew-Hall's career has spanned industry, academia and he is recognised as a leader in University-industry collaboration. He is deeply passionate about building entrepreneurial capability in graduates and the wider community. His understanding of the local, national and international innovation eco-systems allow him to be an innovator of new approaches to create economic and social impact from university research. He has made significant contributions to: improving manufacturing capability in Australia through his research outputs; educating skilled graduates through novel PhD; undergraduate and entrepreneurial education programs; promotion of translation and commercialisation of university IP through the creation of novel business structures and innovation eco-systems.