His work has influenced the way in which courses across campus are taught, the way research is conducted and the facilities and services available to staff members, students and the public. However the passion, pride and professionalism that Neill has brought to all of his work at the ANU is the underlying basis for his nomination for this award. There was unanimous support for his nomination for this award from across all of the Colleges. Neill has been, and still is, a trusted adviser, valued mentor, and friend to all of the ANU staff, students and external stakeholders that he has been in contact and worked with during his time at the ANU.
